

Adventure in Britain (5)

Taro: OK. I got everything from your shopping list: Marmite, liquorice, and... haggis??

Lucy: OK then! Go make yourself some toast. And while that's going, let's start with the liquorice!

Taro: Um, this doesn't look edible.

Lucy: Just try it! Japanese usually hate it!

Taro: Why do you sound so happy about it? OK, I'll try it.... Oh, this is disgusting! Ugh!

(toaster dings)

Lucy: Ah, that should be the toast. Now, it's time for you to try marmite!

Taro: I can't! My taste buds are messed up. Ah! I'm never having that again.

Lucy: Well, maybe the marmite will get rid of the liquorice taste. Now try it.

Taro: Eww, what's wrong with Brits? Marmite tastes even worse! What's it made of?

Lucy: It's just yeast extract. They make it with beer leftovers.

Taro: Why would anyone eat that?

Lucy: Oh, shut up! It's delicious! Now, here's your final task! And this one, you have to finish ALL of it!

Taro: Haggis?

Lucy: Yup! Haggis is Scottish! It's sheep liver, heart, and lungs, minced with meat and stuffed in sheep's stomach! Once you eat all of it, I'll give you your next clue!

Taro: I hate you, Lucy (sad). If you ever come to Japan, I'm gonna give you natto and shirako!

Lucy: Haha! Oh, I can't wait to try them! Well! Good luck!

(Written by Minao Capper)